The Farmer's Dairy Despatch now runs vestibule refrigerator cars on the Lehigh Valley road of a new and elegant design in transferring milk from the Genessee country to New York, Newark and Philadelphia. The Farm-er's Dairy Despatch, which is composed principally of Scranton capitalists, is rapidly gaining business under man-agement of A. P. Bedford, through whose efforts the company was or-death. ganized, and promises to be one of the most valuable milk lines in the coun-

President Joseph S. Harris, of the Reading railroad, has returned to Philadelphia from a trip to the coal regions, where he went to inspect the condition of the flooded collieries. He reported that by the end of the week all of them will be pumped out. The temporary structure to replace the wrecked Mun-cy bridge has also been completed, and the company is about ready to resume traffic over its own lines to Williams-

It is generally understood that nothing will be done toward reorganizing Roading until September or October, by which time it is expected to have all the rival committees harmonized and the way paved for a plan which will be readily adopted by all interests.

The directors of the Phitadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Railroad yesterday declared a semi-annual cash dividend of 3 per cent, payable on July 2, to stockholders of record on May 29. This is a reduction of \(\frac{1}{2}\) per cent. from the May dividend of 1893, which was Si per cent.

The exports of iron and steel from Great Britain for the four months to April 30 show a decided decrease. This year the total amount was 772,335 tons, valued at $5,773.901, while in the corresponding period of last year it was 801,835 tons, valued at $5,881,848; the diminution in quantity being 10.4 per cent., and in value 16.1 per cent. There has been a very large loss this year in the exports of railroad material to the Australian colonies, and a still larger one in the shipments of all classes of iron and steel to India, so that the manufacturers are realizing the effect of the silver policy in the latter country. In spite of this decrease in exports there has been no falling off in production so far this year, but there is much complaint of low prices and increasing stocks on hand. The imports of iron ore have increased a little, having been 1,523,884 tons so far this year, or more by 3 5 per cent. than in the corresponding period of 1893.

President Harris, of the Reading company, after a careful inspection of that company's flooded collieries, has announced that not only was the actual damage to the various properties inconsiderable, but that before the close of the present week all but three of the fifty-two collieries will have been reclaimed. An extra force of men has been put to work pumping out the water from the mines, and their work has been so effective that thirty collieries were reported as being on full time yesterday. The company's week aggregated only 133,560 tons, against 257,886 tons the corresponding week last year, a decrease of 121,326 tons, making the decrease for the year 999,203 tons.

Improvement in the authracite trade continues steadily, and will be promoted by the new circular, with its no more than reasonable increase. If we may believe the Stockholder. there is no longer any doubt that a large number of consumers who have heretofore used soft coal exclusively are now using anthracite. The Lahigh Valley has received several orders from soft coal consumers this week -one order alone aggregating 2,000 tons - and the Reading has been equally fortunate. The Reading, however, could only accept orders subject to delay in de-livery, owing to its mines being flooded by last week's storm. At one time only twelve of the colleries of the company were in operation, but strenuous efforts were made to "pump them out," with such success that all the mines. with the exception of three, have been reclaimed and are now turning out coal. They, moreover, are working full time and free banded, and should the present demand continue it is probable both time and number of men will be increased.

A circular addressed to the holders of the second consolidated mortgage funded coupon bonds of 1885, income bonds, preferred and common stock of the New York, Lake Erie and Western railroad issued by John King, president of the company, in answer to many inquiries, gives the following informa tion concerning the plan of re-organization: Over 80 per cent, of all classes of securities called for in the plan have been deposited thereunder, and the new bonds have been ratified by the shareholders. The new mortgage has been executed by the company as Farmers' Loan and Trust company, as executed by the company and by the company has never contemplated any modification of the terms of the circular of Jan. 2, 1894.

MINOR INDUSTRIAL NOTES:

Thirty of the Reading's fifty-two collierles have resumed operations for four days per week.

W. S. Nevins, for many years local freight agent of the Lehigh Valley rail-road at Buffalo, has resigned.

The Baltimore Central Railroad com-pacy has appealed from seven land dam-age jurors' charges of $600 for eleven sittings in a little $3,200 case.

Augustus Scheuch, foreman of the Cranberry strippings of A. Pardee & Co.. has resigned to accept the position of general superintendent of the strippings of J. C. Haydon & Co. He will assume the duties of his new position next week. Mutchler, Connelly & Donnelly, Phillipsburg contractors, have been awarded the contract to rebuild the break in the Lehigh canal at Easton. The contractors have begun work with a force of 100 men. It will require from 15,000 to 20,000 tons of stone to do the filling.

The anthracite carrying roads are now pressed to their utmost to transport all the coal that is now being mined in this district to tidewater and western points. On Sunday last the Delaware and Hudson Canal company were obliged to ran up-wards of twenty trains north from Car-bondale to prevent getting blocked. The Lehigh Valley and New Jersey Central are also crowded, all of their engines and crews being pressed into service to move the coal over the mountains and return of the empty cars to the mines.—Record.

A Woman Who Scolds Chosts.

Mrs. Roland, connected with very re spectable people and now old and feeble has been for years considered a witch. Ig-norant persons, so consider her. Others say she is the living representative of his dark and awful majesty.

It is said she quarrels as fiercely with the ghosts of her mother and sister upon their requent visits as she ever quareled with them in the desh.

A little boy teld me that when he built fires for Mrs. Roland a few years ago she told him to "set a chair, quick, for Lucy," upon one occusion. When he did so he heard distinctly the rustle of a silk dress, and Mrs. Roland, directing her eyes to the apparently vacant

"Stay in purgatory," she said, "or else you'll have all those silk dresses so creased and glazed that they won't do for Houseman's rag bag. You only come back to hear yourself rustle in silk, you proud hussy, and satan can have no revenge because you burned yourself up here!"

"A great many times," said the child, would she thus receive her ghostly visitors. Sometimes they would come to look over the family jewels, and then there'd be a great fusy, because certain of Mrs. It's relatives robbed her, and she acquainted Lucy with the fact. Once Lucy slapped the witch's jaws. The boy heard the sound distinctly and the red print of a hand showed plainly on the pallid old

Lucy was actually burned alive in that ugly old square house. She was burned in her kitchen fireplace, and only one shoe, inside of which was a foot, proved that flesh, blood and bone had perished there in the pile of blackened ashes on the hearth. Chicago News.

The Fox Was Surprised.

The Rev. J. Murray, in his work on the creation, relates that on one occasion an acquaintance of his was out shooting wild ducks. On reaching a bend of the stream he saw six wild goese out of range. He crouched down in the hope that they would presently come nearer. While thus concealed he observed a fox stealing down to the bank, on reaching which he remained motionless with his eye fixed on the geese

At length he retired, but presently reappeared, carrying in his mouth a very large bundle of moss. He entered the water silently, sank himself and then, keeping the moss above the water, himself concealed, he floated among the geese. Suddenly one of them was drawn under the water, and the fox soon appeared on the bank with the goose on his back. Close to the water's edge he found a hole, caused by the uprooting of a tree. This hole he cleared out and enlarged, placed the goose at the bottom of it and covered his prize with leaves and dry litter, of which there was abundance close at hand. The fox then took his departure, and the interested watcher went to the hole and removed the goose, taking care to restore things to their former appearance.

Then he resolved to observe what followed. In about half an hour the fox returned in company with another. They went straight to the place where the goose had been buried and removed the earth. No goose there. They stood looking at each other for some time, and then suddenly the second fox attacked the other most furiously, as if enraged by having a trick played upon him.-Boston Courier.

Generosity Among Street Arabs. I was a witness on Park row of a pleasant act by a street arab. Three ragged newsboys were trying to sell the earlier editions of the afternoon papers. A man, carrying a large bunch of fine looking bananason his shoulder, passed spring and whose life was as simple as loss, through inability to fill orders, will be quite heavy. Shipments last one of the biggest and ripest, and it fell to the sidewalk. The man kept on, not noticing or caring for the loss.

The banana lay on the pavement for largest of the three ragged urchins spied it, and, with a cry of delight, he ran over and picked it up.

It was natural to suppose that he would greedily.

Without any request, however, from and gave his fellow newsboys each a part. The smallest piece he reserved for himself. showed, I thought, that there was some thing noble hidden under the ragged garments of that little urchin.-New York

The Boy and the Hat.

A funny answer was received by Judge McMath to a query put to a little six-year old boy, whom he sought to entertain while riding in a street car the other evening. The judge was on his way home after a hot day and wore his "stovepipe" hat on the back of his head. Beside him sat a middle aged gentleman with his little six-year-old boy. The father of the boy and the judge carried on a conversation, during which the boy frequently peeped around his father, evidently at-tracted by something.

The judge at length tried to divert the boy from those occasional little stares and saked, "And how are you, my little boy?" "Oh, I'm well," was the modest reply.
"Can you tell me your name?" The name was given. "How old are you?" The boy slyly turned his eyes toward the judge and remarked, "About as old as that hat of yours."-Cleveland Plaindealer.

A Queer Norway Custom.

The Briton who has been in Norway or Denmark, and mixed with the Norwegians at home, cannot for the life of him sym pathize with the Scandinavian custom of shaking hands violently with one's fellow guests at dinner, and uttering the words, "Thanks for meat," when the meal is ended. It seems a most futile and ridiculous proceeding. Well and good, if the interchange of courtesies were confined to each guest severally and his host. But that every individual should engage in a methodical bout of handshaking with every one else seems absurd in the extreme. Yet our Scandinavian friends do not feel themselves under any compulsion to justify this long established custom.-All the Year Round.

THE BEST OF TRAMPS.

OLD JOHNNY APPLESEED. WHO PLANTED MANY ORCHARDS.

He Cooked His Meals in His Tin Pot Hat and Went About Barefooted, Sowing Apple Seeds and Tracts-He Was Considerate Toward Everything Alive.

One of the quaintest, queerest and most original characters that ever trod the trackless wastes of the western wilderness was Jonathan Chapman, known as old Johnny Appleseed. Proneer, pantosophical philanthropist and pomologist was he, taking no thought of himself and living for Be sure to get Campbell's and you will not be disappointed. Johnny Appleseed. Pioneer, philosopher, others only. He would not, could he pre-vent it, suffer the slightest harm to be done to the meanest of living creatures. In the great western solitudes he led the life of the primitive Christian, taking a thought only of the hour and letting a wise Providence look out for the future, He thought hunting morally wrong, and he would let a mosquito sit on him and suck his blood until the insect was satiated to bursting.

This odd old man was the pioneer orchard planter of the west. For over twenty years he wandered over the states of Indiana, Ohio, Illinois and Missouri, plant-ing apple seeds and selling and giving the seedlings. Many of the great apple orchards of the west owe their origin to Johnny Appleseed. Old Johnny was born in Boston in 1775. In 1801 he appeared in the territory of Ohio with a load of apple seeds, which he planted in various places in and about Licking Creek. The first orchard originated by old Johnny was on the farm of Isaac Stodden, in what is now Licking county, O,

"I have often wondered why there was such a widespread ignorance of old Johnny Appleseed in the west," observed a friend of the writer recently. "Even among horticulturists his name is scarcely known, There certainly was no character any more fully identified with the west than he in

Thus it is with all who have ever heard anything of the quaint old man. The wonder is that his name is not a byword and his history a part of the common school curriculum of the day. HIS TIN POT HAT.

The early western pioneers who knew him but slightly considered old Johnny a vagabond. From cursory observation it would appear that their views were pretty well founded. A more uncouth individual it would have been difficult to find. His carments were a bundle of rags. His shoes when he wore any, could scarcely be held on his feet by bits of twine, so dilapidated and worn were they. His pinched and grizzled features were covered by a growth of very shaggy beard. His hair was quite ong and very much faded by constant exposure to wind and weather.

But old Johnny's crowning glory was an old tin mush pot that had a long handle. This battered old culinary utensil he wore for a hat. When he was tramping through the western forests the old man always cooked his meals in the old mush pot. The cravings of hunger satisfied, he would give the pot a careful washing, put it on his head and tramp on. This was his practice for over two decades. The old pot was bright enough on its inside, but its exterior was a sight to behold, so blackened and battered was it.

With all his uncouthness of personality, however, old Johnny Appleseed had an in tellect as keen as the most polished scholars of the day. His ideas were far in advance of his time. Those who have received personal impressions of the old man say that he was a philosopher whose purispring and whose life was as simple as

WHY HE WAS SO NAMED. The name Johnny Appleseed was given him by the early settlers with whom he came in contact because he nearly always about half a minute unseen. Then the carried a bag full of apple seeds with him. These seeds by infinite toil he gathered from the cider presses among the Dutch farmers in Pennsylvania.

When a sufficient quantity of the seeds had been gathered old Johnny would load proceed to eat it all himself, but instead of so doing he called his companions to his the fruit of his labor in a cance and start side and exhibited his find. They eyed it on a voyage down the Onio river into the great wilderness of the west. In Indiana and Illinois, wherever there was the faintthem for a share in the coveted fruit, the est suspicion of a settlement, he went and finder divided the banana into three parts | planted his apple seeds. Sometimes her would select an open place in the forest, his judgment telling him that some day It was only a small thing in itself, yet it the white man would be there. The discovery of fruit bearing apple trees in the woods in these states has led many to be lieve that the apples are indigenous to the

> When Indiana and Illinois became well settled, old Johnny extended his wanderings west of the Mississippi river and planted his apple seeds on Missouri soil. In the wigwam of the Indian and the cabin of the pioneer he was known and always welcome. He must have made twenty such annual trips as the one above described. When his scedlings became large enough he gave them to the settlers or sold them for food and clothes,

SOME OF HIS PECULIARITIES. One of the most peculiar characteristics of old Johnny Appleseed was his religion. He led a simple, moral and harmless life. He was the follower of the new church, a Swedenborgian, and he never lost an opportunity to expound his doctrines. He carried with him always a little bundle of tracts. These he distributed among the early settlers on the border of civilization. When he would make his return trips he would take those tracts up and leave new ones in their places. His advent in Ohio in the early days created a sensation. The simple minded people of the towns and vil-lages knew nothing but the old faith, and their belief was strong in superstition.

Some thought he was crazy, and therefore treated him with compassion; others thought he was possessed of a devil and would not allow him to enter their houses, At this time, however, a member of the Baptist church of Richland county, O., a school teacher and the best read man in the county, invited the strange pilgrim to his home. The Obioan said afterward that he found his guest to be one of the best posted and most brilliant minded persons that he had ever had the pleasure of meeting.

Those who knew the old man say that he was in constant fear of hurting some in-sect or animal. One night he built his camp fire in the woods and prepared to cook his evening meal. The mosquitoes were very thick about the fire and some of were very thick about the fire and some of them flew into it and were scorched. This so worried old Johnny that he took his old mush pot hat, filled it with water and quenched the fire.

It is said that the strange old man to whom the west is indebted for most of its great apple orchards died in Allen county, Ind., near Fort Wayne. A person who knew him says that his death was a triumphant passing into glory. He lay on the grass with his face toward the setting sun. His countenance was wreated with sun. His countenance was wreathed with smiles of rapture, and as the last beams of the great luminary died out of the west the vital spark left its abode of flesh and passed into the great unknown.—Chicago Herald

A Well-Known Physician, Who, Among Other Things, Is Noted for His Frankness.

No one ever heard Dr. E. Grewer use the phrase "I think" in his practice. The doctor is one of those frank, fearless, honest, positive men who never hesitate to say yes or no, as the case may require. "I can cure you" or "I cannot cure you," is his invariable decision after examination, and to this fact fact is attributable his remarkable record without failures. But it would be strange indeed if the doctor were not a more than usually success-But it would be strange indeed if the doctor were not a more than usually successful practitioner. He has been surgeon-inchief in more than one of the largest hospitals of this country, was sately Demonstrator of Physiology and Surgery at the Medico-Chirurgical College in Philadelphia, has been elected an honorary member of the Medico-Chirurgical Association, is a graduate of the University of Pennsylvania, etc., and is still a close student. A man with such a record could not fail to be a successful physician under any circumstances, but when backed by cautious, conservatism in expression, or, to use a more popular phrase, the "besure-you're-right-then-go-ahead" system, it would be more than strange if failure overtook him.
